ABOUT THE CONFERENCE

The world of nanomaterial science is moving forward really fast, covering such a wide range of areas that it's a real challenge for anyone to keep up, unless you're completely into the subject. To deal with this, universities and industries have to work hard to inspire the next generation of scientists and engineers, giving them the essential skills to handle the challenges of this new era.

The main goal of the NSN'24 conference is to thoroughly explore the big picture of nanomaterials and all the different things they can do. Most importantly, we want to make it easy for researchers who are really into this stuff to share their experiences and knowledge on a national level. The scientific program of the seminar is carefully put together, with interesting talks, discussions, oral presentations, and poster sessions. Nanomaterials, because they can be used in so many different ways, offer a bunch of opportunities in areas like microelectronics, pharmaceuticals, and clean energy.

This scientific event is dedicated to the innovative field of nanomaterials, with particular emphasis on their various applications. This event will serve as a catalyst for advancing the field of nanomaterials, thereby making notable contributions to interdisciplinary research in this area. As we immerse ourselves in the exciting and innovative world of nanomaterials, we anticipate this conference will play a pivotal role in shaping the future of this dynamic field in our country.
